Still Unsure? Here's What you Need to Know About CBD

CBD, also known as Cannabidiol, with good reason, is a cannabinoid that takes the health scene by storm. Numerous observational and evidence-based studies have demonstrated CBD's therapeutic benefit for anxiety, pain, and inflammation. CBD is not toxic, which means it does not give the feeling of being poisoned or 'strong!' However, CBD also provides many other therapeutic benefits that make them an ideal choice for many people

There is a lot of misinformation going around about CBD. This has caused mixed emotions toward CBD, ranging from fear to anger.

It is important to get the straight dope on CBD so that you don't miss out on something that could potentially help you greatly. Let's discuss some facts about this component, so you have a clear understanding of what it is (and isn't).

What is CBD?

CBD is short for Cannabidiol and is found in cannabis. While there are over 85 unique components found in cannabis, CBD is the main one. Aside from THC (the stuff that gets you high), no other compound has undergone more studies than CBD.

When buying CBD, you want to make sure that it has the right amount in order to be most effective. For example, if you get it in capsule form, you need to ensure that you get CBD capsules with 200% more bioavailability. Your body will better react to the product, thereby giving you a better experience.

If CBD Oil Comes From Hemp, How is it Legal?

Hemp is still illegal. It's a federal law. But because the THC is extracted out of the hemp, it makes CBD legal.

The highest amount of THC you can legally find in CBD products is less than 0.3%. This makes it safe for all kinds of people without fear of legal action being taken against them.

This is why you see CBD products being sold all over the place and in all types of stores. It's become such a hot item due to the beneficial nature of CBD. Pharmaceuticals can cause some severe damage to the body and mind over time. As a way to stay healthy, more people are turning to natural remedies.

CBD Oil Won't Get You High

Since CBD contains such a minuscule amount of THC, you can't get high. This is one of the biggest misconceptions floating around. THC binds to certain receptors in our brains that make us feel intoxicated. CBD doesn't attach to these receptors, therefore making it impossible to feel high.

It is because of this that nearly anyone can use CBD. It is shown to help with many things which we'll get to momentarily.

To date, there have been no serious side-effects from using CBD. This makes it a great, natural alternative to man-made medications.

What is the Right Dosage of CBD ?

Everyone wants to know, "How much CBD am I supposed to take?" The answer to this question is not the same for everyone. Starting CBD dosage should be done on a case-by-case basis for each individual, and it is always recommended to start slow and low.

There are different dosages of pure CBD oil in different CBD products. As a result, different dosages are needed for different individuals.

That is why you can read the recommended dose on every pack of CBD product

CBD Living

CBD Living creates premium CBD products that are fair trade ingredients and commitment to honestly awesome cannabidiol.

Their uber-expansive line has something for everyone, from pets to matcha lovers. To top it off, CBD Living's proprietary nanotechnology means you'll absorb more of its CBD oil, faster. They've assembled an impressive team of scientists, entrepreneurs, and innovators to offer their potent, 0% THC products around the world.

Most CBD products are oil-based. To make their CBD water work, CBD Living had to change the game by making its cannabidiol water-soluble. They did it with nanotechnology – a process that drastically shrinks CBD molecules, making them easily dissolvable in water. And since the body is mostly water, it's no surprise that people are more able to absorb these products.

CBD Living has more than 70 products in 5000 stores & shipping to consumers worldwide. CBD Living's scientists use ultrasound waves with which break down CBD particles into nanoparticles. Nanoparticles allow enhanced absorption of the CBD by passing through the blood membrane. This technique enables 90 percent bioavailability. When consumed in a traditional CBD product, bioavailability is 10-15 percent. They produce CBD Living Water, chocolates, CBD gummies, freezes, vapes, tinctures, bath bombs, and more.
